They demand also this pacific measure - the organisation of a League of Nations. They regard it, no doubt, as difficult of realisation but not as impracticable. They speak of it as the most hopeful, perhaps the only hopeful, basis of a just and enduring peace. Something will have to be said later about the details of the scheme, so far as they have been formulated or outlined. But let us take it now simply in its most general idea - that of a League of Nations to maintain and enforce peace, with an international tribunal to decide justiciable disputes between nations - that is such questions as having been embodied in treaties or coming under the head of some accepted international law admit of settlement by judicial process - and for the greater matters of controversy an international court of arbitration which must at least have all such matters fully laid before it by the contending nations, and have time allowed to it to make proposals and to have them listened to and considered by both sides, before either nation or group of nations could go to war or mobilise its forces for war without becoming the enemy of the whole League; and the authority of the League is to have behind it the sanction of economic pressure to be exerted by the whole League - such as the boycotting of a recalcitrant nation - and, at the last resort, the armed force of the whole League to support its action.
