[While Lizzie continues drawing, Carroll moves off a little to look at books, c., in library. Wise. [Speaking outside ] Come Lizzie [enters in muffler and gaiters, with riding-whip in hand], the horses are at the door, and we ve a fine afternoon for a run over in Jersey. [Observing Carroll]. [Aside]. My new clerk, by all that s wonderful. What can he be doing here, in my house, and alone with my daughter. Lizzie. Wait a moment, papa, and I ll let you see how much I have improved with good instruction. Wise. Oh! he s here giving lessons in drawing. [Aside]. He s no doubt some foreign scapegrace, come over to this country, to mend his fortunes and makes use of his accomplishments, to get inside of people s houses. Truly our houses are but little protection to us now-a-days. We have English burglars entering through the roof, Irish policemen in at the...
