Likewise when Liebe¹⁴⁵ immersed chalk a year and a half in MgCl. solutions of various concentrations nb trace of decomposition could be detected. More successful results, however, are reported by Leitmeier,¹⁴⁰ who in his experiments on the formation of aragonite claims to have prepared dolomite also. In these experiments.1 gram of powdered CaCO₂ in 100 grams of water was subjected to the action of.001, .005, .01 and.05 gram of MgSO₄.7H₂O and MgCl₂.6H₂O respectively. At low temperatures dolomite was obtained at none of these concentrations; but at medium temperature (10 C.) a few fine grains which reacted as dolomite microchemically were obtained at the concentration of.01 gram. At a concentration of.05 gram, however, copious crystals which did not react with iron chloride were found in the residue. These showed partly developed crystallographic boundaries and appeared to possess the distorted structure characteristic of dolomite rhombohedrons. In the.1 gram solutions a much richer mixture of dolomite was obtained. The effect of higher temperatures was to produce essentially the same results, for dolomite was obtained at the same concentrations. Elements of Chemical and Physical Geology, English translation.
